Le traité de Maastricht, 20 ans après

Les dirigeants européens font actuellement face à la double tâche d'éteindre les flammes de la crise et de poser les fondations de l'avenir de l'Europe. La capacité des institutions de l'UE à convaincre les gouvernements d'entreprendre en commun des actions décisives sera donc primordiale car les pays européens ont plus de chances d'atteindre leurs objectifs s'ils travaillent ensemble, a expliqué l'ancien président de la Commission européenne Jacques Delors aux participants d'une conférence sur le traité de Maastricht organisée par Notre Europe et le European Policy Centre le 7 février 2012 à Bruxelles.

Discours d'ouverture de Jacques Delors : « le traité de Maastricht, synthèse et interrogations »

« La coïncidence entre la contrainte des événements et une volonté politique » a conduit à la signature du traité de Maastricht, a déclaré Jacques Delors, ancien président de la Commission européenne.

Entre 1988 et 1991, la chute du mur de Berlin et le conflit aux frontières européennes en ex-Yougoslavie ont contribué à animer le débat sur l'avenir de l'Europe a rappelé Jacques Delors, président fondateur du think tank Notre Europe.

L'effondrement de l'Union soviétique a eu une influence immense sur l'Europe. « [Avec] le printemps de l'Est [il y a eu] une sorte d'espoir. » Et, la vision des dirigeants européens a permis que la chute du mur n'engendre pas de nouvelles victimes, a-t-il ajouté.

Les autres nations européennes suivaient avec attention les implications de l'évolution de la situation en Allemagne et plus à l'Est. Le chancelier Helmut Kohl devait alors apaiser leurs appréhensions. C'était une époque difficile et « il y avait des raisons de s'interroger [sur l'avenir de l'Europe] », a reconnu Jacques Delors.

Après la chute du mur de Berlin, la Commission européenne a assumé ses responsabilités et déclaré que l'Allemagne de l'Est faisait partie de l'Europe. La réunification a eu lieu en 1990, a-t-il rappelé.

« Le chancelier Kohl, qui voyait les difficultés de la réunification allemande [...], et ses partenaires, François Mitterrand notamment, pensaient que pour surmonter toutes ces difficultés [...] il fallait faire un pas vers l'union politique », s'est souvenu l'ancien président de la Commission.

Alors que l'Europe était aux prises avec ces difficultés, des conflits extérieurs faisaient rage, a-t-il indiqué, faisant référence à la première guerre du Golfe en Irak, dans laquelle les nations européennes étaient alliées, et aux conflits yougoslaves.

« Notre impuissance [était] caractérisée. [...] On m'a alors envoyé en mission à Belgrade [...] et [j'ai] eu la conviction que la séparation des pays était inévitable. La Grande-Bretagne, les Pays-Bas, et surtout la France et l'Allemagne n'étaient pas d'accord sur la reconnaissance de la Croatie. J'ai cru un moment que nous allions connaître une grave crise », a avoué Jacques Delors.

« [Finalement], la France et l'Allemagne ont décidé d'oublier leurs divergences pour essayer d'aller vers l'avant par le traité de Maastricht. », a-t-il dit.
